ANGELA REIGN

COUNTRY ARTIST MAKES AN IMPACT
BOTH ON AND OFF THE STAGE

BY: MIKE WALLER

Given her relatively short tenure in the world of professional music, Angela's name may or may not be familiar. But once you've seen Angela Reign on stage, it's neither a name nor an experience you're likely to soon forget.

Angela's powerful vocals, diversity of music, bold look and unparalleled stage presence result in an audience experience that is truly like no other. In a typical 90-minute show you're likely to hear southern rock, country, classic rock and the blues; all delivered via a mix of Angela's powerful radio-played original music, and masterfully performed covers that run the gambit from Lynyrd Skynyrd to Tina Turner to Miranda Lambert to Pink to Metallica. Whatever your musical tastes, if you like to be entertained, you're going to enjoy this show.

You're also going to see a wardrobe collection that would make even a Kardashian envious. In the last Angela Reign concert I attended, the high-energy star performed in everything from rhinestone cowboy boots, hat and jeans, to a sequin evening gown to leather pants and corset. And with most of these costume changes happening during short high-energy instrumental breaks, the show never misses a beat.

And the music industry has taken notice. Industry critic Backstage Beat shared "Angela is the total package... talent, looks, energy and has an excellent stage presence... a true performer".

And when asked about Angela Reign, Hall of Fame DJ, Alan White had this to say. "Angela's not a beginner. If she has to go on tour with some big star, she'll hold her own. Is she a hit artist? Seems to me she is. Crowds like her. She performs great.

She looks terrific. You have to have it or you don't and she has it."

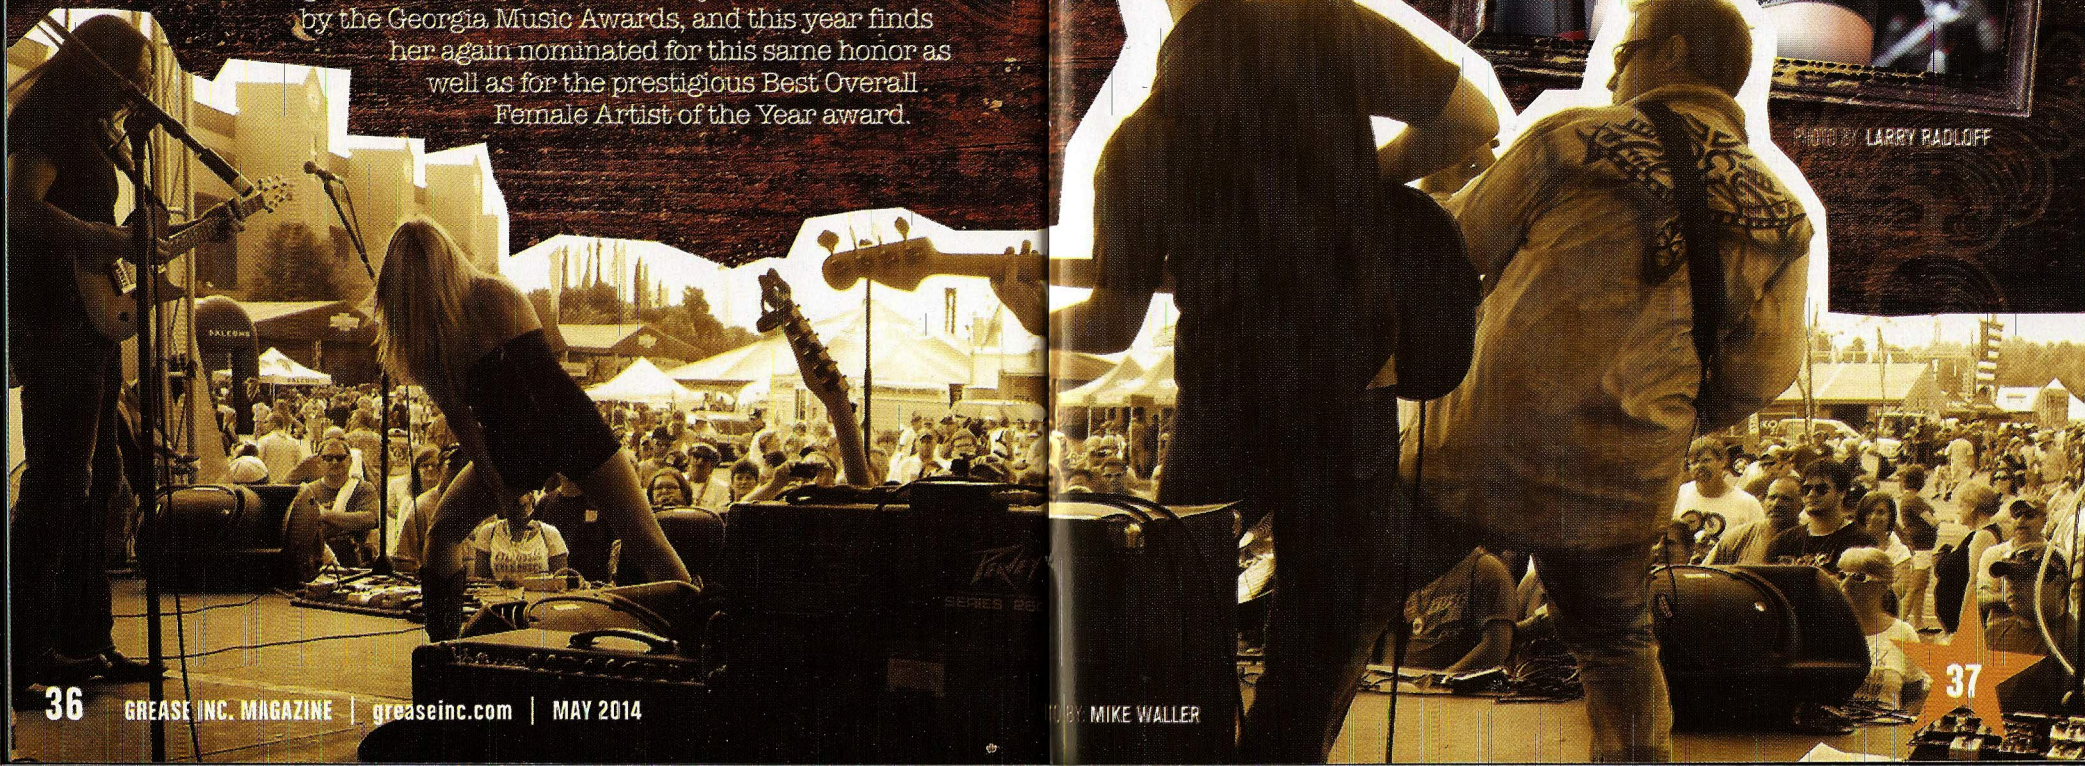

In addition to her growing fan base, Angela's efforts in 2013 led to her being crowned Best Female Country Artist of the Year by the Georgia Music Awards, and this year finds her again nominated for this same honor as well as for the prestigious Best Overall Female Artist of the Year award.

And while Reign has played venues like Wild Bill's, Electric Cowboy, Smith's Olde Bar, and 120 Tavern and Music Hall in her home town of Atlanta, as well as the legendary Bluebird Cafe in Nashville, it's special events where Reign might be at her very best. Reign has performed concerts and pre-game entertainment for the NCAA Final Four Championship Game in Atlanta, the finals of Hard Rock's International battle of the Bands, and is in high demand across the U.S. to perform the National Anthem and God Bless America at professional sporting events such as the Professional Bull Riders tour events, NCAA basketball games, Major League Baseball games, and at the NCAA Div III Basketball Championship Game. Angela also had the opportunity to support Rodney Atkins this past summer and headline the Coca-Cola Fan stage at the 100,000+ person Labor Day event at Atlanta Motor Speedway.

Equally important to Angela has been giving back to others through her music. A huge supporter of a number of philanthropic causes, Angela has hosted benefit concerts for organizations which have included the Cancer Support Community, the MS Society, and Songs for Kids among others, and annually hosts a benefit concert for the Wounded Warrior Fund.

I asked Angela about the secret to her success in this challenging business. She was quick to share both her deep gratitude for the success she's experienced and a strong belief that her accomplishments have only been made possible by the hard work of a very talented and extensive team.

"Our success is a testament to the efforts of a team of dozens of people including my band, producers, production teams, managers, my label, photographers, writers, fashion designers, hair and make-up artists, sponsors and of course thousands of fans across the globe," states Reign. "It truly 'takes a village' in this complex and challenging business, and I couldn't do it without my amazing team, nor would I want to."

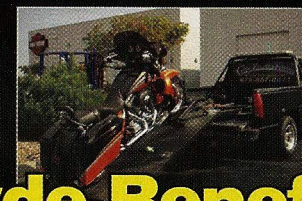

I also had a chance to ask Angela what we can expect next.

"In May I'll be releasing my latest single, a dance remix of my popular radio-aired single, 'Cowgirls Do'," added Reign. "The song is a collaboration with the Georgia Music Awards winner for Best Hip Hop Artist of the Year, Se'von. We've done trial releases of the song in some big clubs with great response. I'm very excited about the release of this song"

To keep tabs on what Reign has coming next, you can follow her on social media platforms like Facebook and Twitter as well as check out www.angelareign.com to see where she will be performing live, an opportunity not to be missed.
